

Idaho rafting trips

Arizona Republic
March 11, 2001

Many rafting trips through the Grand Canyon are booked by this time of year for the coming summer. But in Idaho, where rivers run wild and there is an abundance of river rafting companies, it's easier to secure a seat.

Former Gilbert residents Chris

Swersey and Mary Wright, who spent a decade of summers as river guides for Silver Cloud Expeditions in Salmon, Idaho, bought the company last year and moved to Idaho full-time. Their company offers five- and six-day wilderness float trips on the Salmon River.

As Swersey, former brewmaster

at Leinenkugel's Ballyard Brewery at Bank One Ballpark says, a river trip in Idaho beats the Valley heat in July anytime.
